¹Subsequent to trial, Beth Maxwell Stratton resigned her position as chapter 7 trustee.
On November 3, 2010, Sheryl Strain was appointed to serve as her successor.

1 Before the court is a complaint for turnover of property of the bankruptcy
2 estate filed by the Trustee. The Trustee seeks to enforce the terms of a promissory 3 note in the original amount of $90,000 (the “Promissory Note”) issued during the 4 Debtor’s marriage, by the defendant, Daniel Harless (“Harless”) to the Debtor’s ex-5 spouse, defendant Michael Anderson (“Michael”). As of the commencement of this 6 case, the unpaid balance of the Promissory Note was $70,000. Michael did not 7 appear at the trial and has not pursued his interest in the Promissory Note. Harless 8 contends that the Promissory Note represents the proceeds of Michael’s separate 9 property and is therefore not property of the bankruptcy estate. He also contends 10 that the Promissory Note is unenforceable and worthless. For the reason set forth 11 below, Judgment will be entered in favor of the Trustee.

12 This memorandum contains the court’s findings of fact and conclusions of 13 law required by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 52(a), made applicable to this 14 adversary proceeding by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 7052. The 15 bankruptcy court has jurisdiction over this matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1334 and 16 11 U.S.C. § 542² and General Orders 182 and 330 of the U.S. District Court for the 17 Eastern District of California. This is a core proceeding as defined in 28 U.S.C.
18 § 157(b)(2)(A) & (E).

19 Background and Findings of Fact.

20 Prior to commencement of the bankruptcy, the Debtor, Araceli Anderson 21 (“Araceli”) was married to defendant, Michael Anderson (the “Anderson 22 Marriage”). They were married in 2000 and maintained a residence in Los Banos, 23 California. Between 2002 and 2007, Michael and Araceli operated at least three effective date of The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005,

1 businesses known as Anderson Property Investments, Anderson Project
2 Management, and Anderson Hauling & Clean-Up.³

3 On or about June 28, 2007, Michael acquired a parcel of commercial 4 property located in Livingston, California (the “Livingston Property”). The grant 5 deed for the Livingston Property stated that title would be held by “Michael L.
6 Anderson, a married man as his sole and separate property.” Araceli’s name was 7 intentionally omitted from the grant deed. Michael told Araceli that “wives could 8 not be involved,” presumably referring to a business venture for development of the 9 Livingston Property.

10 However, Michael did need Araceli to be involved in the transaction to 11 acquire the Livingston Property. The purchase price of the Livingston Property was 12 approximately $1,050,000. A cash “down payment” of $5,000 was made from 13 funds which were community property of the Anderson Marriage. On or about 14 August 1, 2007, Michael obtained a loan, in his name, in the amount of $525,000
15 (plus prepaid interest) from West Coast Fund L.P. (the “WCF Loan”). The WCF 16 Loan was secured by a first priority deed of trust against the Livingston Property.
17 Additional funds were obtained through a loan which Araceli and Michael obtained 18 from Leo Kesselman in the amount of $450,000 (the “Kesselman Note”). Both 19 Araceli and Michael signed the Kesselman Note and related security agreements.
20 The Kesselman Note was secured by a second priority deed of trust against the 21 Livingston Property. The Kesselman Note was also secured by four parcels of 22 property owned by Michael and Araceli located in Los Banos, California (the “Los 23 Banos Properties”).

24 On or about July 16, 2007, Araceli signed, at Michael’s request, an 25 interspousal transfer deed (the “Interspousal Deed”) wherein Araceli purportedly 26

1 relinquished any community property interest in the Livingston Property and 2 affirmed the title as Michael's sole and separate property. Araceli understood that 3 Michael was going to manage a commercial development on the Livingston 4 Property in which, for some reason, "wives could not be involved." Based on the 5 petition, it appears that Michael and Araceli had previously been involved in various 6 real estate management and investment projects. Araceli understood she was 7 relinquishing control of the Livingston Property to Michael, but she did not intend 8 or understand that she was relinquishing her interest in the Livingston Property.
9 Araceli and Michael were still married and living together at the time. Araceli 10 testified that she would not otherwise have agreed to use community property funds 11 for a down payment on the Livingston Property and to encumber the Los Banos 12 Properties with the Kesselman Note.

13 On or about August 27, 2007, Michael executed a grant deed transferring the 14 Livingston Property to himself and a friend, defendant Harless. Based on that grant 15 deed, Michael and Harless each held legal title to 50% of the Livingston Property as 16 tenants in common. In late February or early March 2008, Michael and Harless 17 entered into a "buyout agreement" whereby Harless agreed to purchase Michael's 18 50% interest in the Livingston Property. Harless also agreed to assume and hold 19 Michael harmless from all of the outstanding debts against the Livingston Property.
20 As part of that transaction, on or about March 5, 2008, Harless also executed the 21 Promissory Note for $90,000.00 in favor of Michael. With a check dated February 22 20, 2008, Harless delivered to Michael an initial payment against the Promissory 23 Note in the amount of $20,000. The balance of the Promissory Note, in the amount 24 of $70,000 plus accrued interest at the rate of 5% per annum, was secured by a 25 junior lien against the Livingston Property. The Livingston Property has since been 26 lost to foreclosure and the Promissory Note is unsecured.

27 Araceli separated from Michael in March 2008 and subsequently filed a 28 petition to dissolve the Anderson Marriage (the "Marital Dissolution Action").

1 Even though Araceli's name was never reflected in title to the Livingston Property, 2 Michael assured Araceli on numerous occasions that she had an equal interest in the 3 Livingston Property. In May 2008, after their separation and after Michael sold his 4 interest in the Livingston Property to Harless, Michael left a voice mail message for 5 Araceli affirming again that Araceli would receive half of the proceeds from the 6 Promissory Note. Araceli commenced this bankruptcy case on July 25, 2008. As of 7 commencement of this case, the community property of the Anderson Marriage had 8 not yet been divided in the Marital Dissolution Action.

9 Issues Presented.

10 The primary issue in this adversary proceeding is whether the Promissory 11 Note was actually community property of the Anderson Marriage at the 12 commencement of this case. If so, then it became property of the bankruptcy estate 13 pursuant to § 541(a)(2) and the Trustee is entitled to enforce its terms. If not, then 14 the Trustee has no interest in the Promissory Note and enforcement is an issue to be 15 resolved between Michael and Harless. Michael did not appear at trial and has 16 presented no evidence to establish that he has a "separate property" interest in the 17 Promissory Note.⁴

18 Harless contends that the Promissory Note is Michael's separate property, but 19 that does not expunge Harless' obligation to honor the terms of the Promissory 20 Note. A secondary issue then is whether Harless has standing to assert and defend 21 Michael's interest in the Promissory Note. Harless also contends that the 22 Promissory Note is unenforceable and worthless based on allegations of fraud (by 23 Michael) and failure of consideration relating to commercial development of the 24 Livingston Property. However, those issues were not pled by way of counterclaim 25

26 ⁴Michael Anderson was named and served as a defendant in this adversary 27 proceeding. On February 12, 2009, he filed a "pro se" responsive pleading generally 28 denying all allegations in the complaint. Thereafter, Michael attended virtually all of the status conferences, but he did not appear or testify at the trial.

or affirmative defenses and they will not be considered for the first time here.

Applicable Law.

The Bankruptcy Estate's Interest in Community Property. At the commencement of a bankruptcy case, a married debtor's interest in community property becomes property of the bankruptcy estate under § 541(a)(1) or (a)(2), which provide in pertinent part:

(a) The commencement of a case under section 301 . . . of this title creates an estate. Such estate is comprised of all the following property, wherever located and by whomever held:

(1) . . . all legal or equitable interests of the debtor in property as of the commencement of the case.

(2) All interests of the debtor and the debtor's spouse in community property as of the commencement of the case that is—

(A) under the sole, equal, or joint management and control of the debtor; or

(B) liable for an allowable claim against the debtor, or for both an allowable claim against the debtor and an allowable claim against the debtor's spouse, to the extent that such interest is so liable.

The bankruptcy court must look to state law to determine what property interest the bankruptcy estate may hold. Keller v. Keller (In re Keller), 185 B.R. 796, 800 (9th Cir. BAP 1995), citing Butner v. United States, 440 U.S. 48, 55 (1979). The bankruptcy trustee has no greater rights than the debtor in whose shoes she stands. Id. at 800-01, citing Matter of Paderewski, 564 F.2d 1353, 1356 (9th Cir. 1977).

Under federal bankruptcy law the community property of both debtor and nondebtor spouse, or former spouse, becomes property of the bankruptcy estate on the date of the petition. The “[c]ommunity creditors of both the filing spouse and the nonfiling spouse would be permitted to share in the community property by filing claims in the bankruptcy case.” Miller v. Walpin (In re Miller), 167 B.R. 202, 207 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 1994), quoting July, 1973 Report of the Commission of the Bankruptcy Laws of the United States, H.R. Doc. No. 137, 93rd Cong., 1st Sess. Pt.

1 1 (1973); § 541(a)(2) (emphasis original). See also Keller, 185 at 799-800; Grimm 2 v. Grimm (In the Matter of Grimm) 82 B.R. 989, 991-92 (Bankr. W.D. Wis. 1988).

3 The Bankruptcy Code does not define “community property,” though it does 4 identify “community claim” in § 101(7). Therefore, “[b]ankruptcy courts are 5 required to look to state property law . . . to determine the [community] property 6 which is to be included in the bankruptcy estate.” Dumas v. Mantle (In Re Mantle), 7 153 F.3d 1082, 1084 (9th Cir. 1998), citing Butner, 440 U.S. at 55.

8 As a general rule, in the State of California, all property acquired during a 9 marriage is community property. California Family Code § 760.⁵ The “community” 10 presumption is a rebuttable presumption which may be overcome by the party 11 contesting the “community” status of the property. In re Marriage of Haines, 33 12 Cal.App.4th 277, 290 (1995).

13 However, married couples may also legally hold title to property separately, 14 or together as joint tenants, or tenants in common. A spouse may transmute the 15 status of his or her property from separate property to property held jointly by 16 agreement or transfer. California Family Code § 850. A transmutation is “an 17 interspousal property transaction or agreement that works a change in the character 18 of the property.” Haines, 33 Cal.App.4th at 293. “A transmutation of real or 19 personal property is not valid unless made in writing by an express declaration that 20 is made, joined in, consented to, or accepted by the spouse whose interest in the 21 property is adversely affected.” California Family Code § 852(a).

22 California courts have held that compliance with California Family Code 23 § 852 alone does not guarantee the validity of a transmutation. “When an 24

25 ⁵California Family Code § 760 states:
26

27 Except as otherwise provided by statute, all property, real or personal, wherever 28 situated, acquired by a married person during the marriage while domiciled in this state is community property.

1 interspousal transaction advantages one spouse, [t]he law, from considerations of 2 public policy, presumes such transactions to have been induced by undue influence.
3 Courts of equity . . . view gifts and contracts which are made or take place between 4 parties occupying confidential relations with a jealous eye.” In re Marriage of 5 Barneson, 69 Cal.App.4th 583, 588 (1999), citing Haines, 33 Cal.App.4th at 293-
6 94. The statutory basis for these rulings stems from California Family Code § 721 7 which provides:

8 [I]n transactions between themselves, a husband and 9 wife are subject to the general rules governing fiduciary 10 relationships which control the actions of persons 11 occupying confidential relations with each other. This confidential relationship imposes a duty of the highest good faith and fair dealing on each spouse, and neither shall take any unfair advantage of the other.

12 Under California Evidence Code § 662, there is a competing presumption 13 based on the properties’ title. “The owner of the legal title to property is presumed 14 to be the owner of the full beneficial title. This presumption may be rebutted only 15 by clear and convincing proof.” When the “community property” and “undue 16 influence” presumptions conflict with the “title” presumption in California Evidence 17 Code § 662, the Family Code presumptions prevail. Haines, 33 Cal.App.4th at 283.

18 Here, the burden of proof is on the advantaged spouse, Michael, to 19 demonstrate that the Interspousal Deed relating to the Livingston Property was not 20 obtained through undue influence. In re Marriage of Burkle, 139 Cal.App.4th 712, 21 731 (2006). “[N]umerous cases apply the presumption of undue influence when the 22 marital transaction is one in which one spouse deeds his or her interest in 23 community property to the other spouse, for no consideration or for clearly 24 inadequate consideration.” Burkle, 139 Cal.App.4th at 731; Weil v. Weil (Weil), 37
25 Cal. 2d 770, 787-89 (1951). The Burkle court held that the language of California 26 Family Code § 721 combined with the court’s analysis of the case authorities, led it 27 “to conclude that the ‘advantage’ which raises a presumption of undue influence in 28 a marital transaction involving a contractual exchange between spouses must

1 necessarily be an unfair advantage.” Burkle at 730. See also In re Marriage of 2 Mathews, 133 Cal.App.4th 624, 628-629 (2005) (holding that “a spouse obtains an 3 advantage if that spouse's position is improved, he or she obtains a favorable 4 opportunity, or otherwise gains, benefits, or profits”).

5 The Weil court acknowledges that “when a husband secures a property 6 advantage from his wife, the burden is cast upon him to show that there has been no 7 undue influence.” Weil at 788. Cases such as Weil and Haines, involving property 8 transfers without consideration, necessarily raise a presumption of undue influence, 9 because one spouse obtains a benefit at the expense of the other, who receives 10 nothing in return.” Burkle at 731-32. Thus, the advantage obtained “may be 11 reasonably characterized as a species of unfair advantage.” Id. (noting that not just 12 any advantage would suffice to generate the presumption of undue influence).

13 Once an unfair advantage is established, the advantaged spouse bears the 14 burden of proving, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the transaction was not 15 the result of undue influence. In In re Estate of Cover, 188 Cal. 133 (1922), the 16 court found . . . “undue influence upon the theory that . . . the agreement in question 17 was procured from the wife as the result of constructive fraud, having its origin in 18 the confidential and fiduciary relation of husband and wife” Id. at 142-43.
19 The Cover court found that the wife executed the agreement “in ignorance of her 20 rights and without independent advice as to its meaning and effect.” Id. at 145. The 21 court further found that the wife released her expectancy to her portion of a two 22 hundred thousand dollar estate in return for the wholly inadequate consideration of 23 property valued at fourteen thousand dollars. Id. at 137, 144.

24 In the case, In re the Marriage of Delaney, 111 Cal.App.4th 991, 999-1000
25 (First Dist. 2003), the court iterated the following factors which the advantaged 26 spouse must establish to overcome the presumption:

27 1. That the transmutation of the property to joint tenancy was freely and 28 voluntarily made;

1 2. with full knowledge of all the facts; and 2 3. with a complete understanding of the effect of a transfer from the 3 spouse's unencumbered separate property interest to a joint interest as Husband and 4 Wife. Id.

5 Analysis and Conclusions of Law.

6 The Livingston Property was Community Property of the Anderson
7 Marriage. This analysis begins with acquisition of the Livingston Property. The 8 Livingston Property was acquired during the Anderson Marriage, so the court must 9 initially presume that the Livingston Property was intended to be community 10 property. This result is corroborated by the fact that acquisition of the Livingston 11 Property was substantially funded with community assets and community debt.
12 Araceli signed the Interspousal Deed at Michael's insistence with assurances that 13 she would still have an interest in the Livingston Property and the resulting 14 commercial development. There is no other reasonable explanation for the fact that 15 she also agreed to use community assets to fund the purchase of Livingston 16 Property. There was no evidence that Araceli understood the potential effect of the 17 Interspousal Deed, or that she intended to gift away, or transmute her interest in, the 18 Los Banos Properties and the funds that were used for a down payment for the 19 benefit of Michael alone. Indeed, on several occasions, Michael made affirmative 20 representations to Araceli regarding her ongoing interest in the Livingston Property 21 and the resulting Promissory Note.

22 Ordinarily, Michael would have the burden of rebutting the "community" 23 presumption by showing that the Livingston Property was never intended to be 24 community property. However, Michael did not appear or testify at trial. Based 25 thereon, the court finds that Michael has waived any interest he may have in the 26 Promissory Note. In doing so, Michael has also failed to sustain his burden of proof 27 to rebut the presumption of undue influence and show that the Livingston Property 28 was not community property.

1 Harless' Defenses. Harless contends that the Promissory Note is Michael's 2 sole and separate property because Araceli signed the Interspousal Deed, 3 purportedly relinquishing her "community" interest in the Livingston Property.
4 Harless testified that he never understood Araceli to have any interest in the 5 Livingston Property. However, Harless offered no evidence to show that the 6 Interspousal Deed was executed for Harless' benefit or that he relied in any way on 7 the Interspousal Deed. Moreover, Harless failed to show that he has any pecuniary 8 interest in the court's determination of the Promissory Note's "community" status.
9 Harless is the obligor on the Promissory Note and it makes no legal difference to 10 him whether that obligation is enforced by Michael or by the Trustee. Harless is a 11 stranger to the Anderson Marriage and has no standing to assert Michael's interest 12 in, or objections to, the character of the Promissory Note.

13 The doctrine of "prudential standing" requires that a party assert his own 14 claims, rather than the claims of another. In re Weisband, 427 B.R. 13, 18 (Bankr.
15 D.Ariz. 2010). Federal courts must be hesitant to resolve controversies involving 16 the rights of third parties who are not before the court. "It may be that the holders 17 of those rights have simply chosen not to assert them." Korneff v. Downey Regional 18 Medical Center-Hospital, Inc. (In re Downey Regional Medical Center-Hospital, 19 Inc.), ___ B.R. ___, 2010 WL 5059586 (9th Cir. BAP 2010) (citations omitted).

20 Harless argued at trial that the Promissory Note is worthless and 21 unenforceable because the commercial development project on the Livingston 22 Property failed. The Livingston Property was lost to foreclosure after Michael and 23 Harless executed the buyout agreement. Harless also argued that Michael 24 committed fraud in connection with the buyout agreement and his management of 25 the Livingston Property. Harless does have standing to assert any personal defenses 26 to enforcement of the Promissory Note itself, and the Trustee would be bound by 27 any ruling on those defenses. However, Harless did not assert his defenses by way 28 of counterclaim or affirmative defense.

1 Harless' defenses are obviously prejudicial to the Trustee. They represent 2 new matters extraneous to the Trustee's prima facie case which, it proved, would 3 deny the Trustee's right to enforce the Promissory Note. As such, they constitute 4 affirmative defenses which should have been raised in Harless' responsive pleading 5 or in some subsequent pleading prior to trial. As a general rule, an affirmative 6 defense is waived if it would be prejudicial to the plaintiff and was not timely raised 7 in the proceeding. See Marshack v. Orange Commercial Credit (In re National 8 Lumber and Supply, Inc.), 184 B.R. 74, 79 (9th Cir. BAP 1995). Harless' defenses 9 to enforcement of the Promissory Note have been waived.

10 Conclusion.

11 Based on the foregoing, the court finds and concludes that Michael's 50% 12 interest in the Livingston Property was community property of the Anderson 13 Marriage prior to the time it was sold to Harless. Accordingly, the Promissory Note, 14 which represents the proceeds from sale of the community property, was also 15 community property and became property of the bankruptcy estate upon 16 commencement of this case. Michael failed to overcome the "community property" 17 presumption and the presumption of undue influence relating to the manner in 18 which he took title to the Livingston Property. By failing to appear at trial, Michael 19 has waived the right to assert a "separate" property interest in the Promissory Note.

20 Harless is the obligor on the Promissory Note. He has no pecuniary interest 21 in the court's determination of the Promissory Note's "community property" status.
22 Further, the defenses which Harless raised for the first time at trial were not 23 properly pled by way of counterclaim or affirmative defense and are thereby waived.
24 The Promissory Note may therefore be enforced, according to its terms by the 25 Trustee. The Trustee shall submit a proposed judgment.
