OPINION

v. )

JOHN ERNEST BORSOS, )

Defendant. )

Dan Siegel, Siegel & Yee, Oakland, California, for John Ernest
Borsos.Jeffrey B. Demain (argued), Jonathan Weissglass, Altshuler Berzon
LLP, San Francisco, California, for United Healthcare Workers-West.

CHRISTOPHER M. KLEIN, Bankruptcy Judge:

A reversal on appeal voided a money judgment on which wages had been garnished. The garnishee wants his money back.The backstory is a testosterone-fueled vendetta by Service Employees International Union ("SEIU") against former officers of a SEIU local who lost a power struggle with SEIU and, after SEIU ousted them, became officers in a newly-formed rival union. SEIU sued and obtained money judgments against the outcasts.

1 One of those judgment debtors seeks to recover $15,830.04
2 garnished from his wages in the interval between (1) entry by 3 this court of a judgment excepting SEIU's money judgment from 4 discharge in bankruptcy and (2) the subsequent reversal on appeal
5 of that nondischargeability determination.

6 SEIU resists restitution by making a counter-motion to 7 enforce a settlement agreement that was not executed and by 8 sidestepping the unjust enrichment question.

9 There being no enforceable settlement agreement, the motion
10 to order return of garnished funds due to reversal of the 11 nondischargeability judgment on which the garnishments were 12 premised will be GRANTED under the analysis recently restated in 13 Restatement (Third) of Restitution § 18 and, independently, to 14 remedy violation of the bankruptcy discharge injunction.

15

17 Testosterone. SEIU took over its local, United Healthcare
18 Workers-West ("UHW"), and replaced its officers, including John 19 Borsos, for resisting SEIU's command to transfer 65,000 members 20 without a vote to another SEIU local.

21 The day after their ouster, the former officers became 22 officers and employees of a newly-formed rival, National Union of 23 Healthcare Workers ("NUHW"), which began competing with UHW.

24 War erupted. See, e.g., SEIU v. NUHW, 598 F.3d 1061, 1064-
25 66 (9th Cir. 2010). SEIU won.

26 Vendetta. Not content merely to win the power struggle,

28 <sup>1</sup>These facts supplement oral findings made at close of trial per Fed. R. Civ. P. 52, incorporated by Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7052.

1 SEIU and UHW sued the ousted officers, and NUHW, and others for 2 damages for alleged misuse of union funds in breach of fiduciary
3 duty during the weeks before the SEIU takeover. SEIU, et al. v.
4 Rosselli, et al., No. 09-CV-0404, N.D. Cal.

5 After an ugly fight, SEIU and UHW obtained jury verdicts
6 against various defendants. As District Judge Alsup noted, "the 7 love lost between the parties during this action was so great
8 that zero cooperation could be expected." SEIU v. Rosselli, 2010
9 Westlaw 4502176, at *3 (N.D. Cal. 2010) (Order on Bill of Costs).

10 The SEIU/UHW judgment against Borsos was $66,600.00, plus 11 costs of $9,245.17. There was no stay pending appeal.

12 Borsos filed a chapter 7 bankruptcy case on December 22,
13 2010, as of which date $2,019.74 had been garnished from his NUHW
14 wages. The bankruptcy automatic stay stopped the garnishments.

15 Vendetta. UHW, which is enforcing the SEIU judgment, filed 16 nondischargeability actions against Borsos and others to except 17 the judgment debts from discharge as incurred by fiduciary fraud
18 or defalcation per 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4). See, e.g., UHW v.
19 Kristal (In re Kristal), 464 B.R. 404 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2011).

20 After trial, this court excepted the judgment debt from 21 discharge based on law of the circuit applying a strict-liability 22 to the § 523(a)(4) fiduciary defalcation discharge exception,
23 under which view a culpable state of mind is not essential.

24 Borsos appealed. While that appeal was pending, the Supreme 25 Court held that the fiduciary defalcation discharge exception
26 under 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4) requires proof of a culpable state of 27 mind. Bullock v. BankChampaign, 133 S.Ct. 1754, 1759-60 (2013).
28 On that account, this court's judgment was reversed and remanded.

1 Vendetta. On remand, UHW elected to pursue a re-trial and 2 to attempt to prove that Borsos had the requisite culpable state
3 of mind. UHW did not carry its burden of proof on that question.
4 Hence, judgment was rendered declaring the SEIU/UHW judgment debt
5 against Borsos to have been discharged. There was no appeal.

6 In the interval between this court's first judgment and 7 reversal of that judgment, UHW garnished $15,830.04 from Borsos'
8 NUHW wages. As those garnishments turned out to have been on 9 account of a judgment that became "void" by operation of 11
10 U.S.C. § 524(a)(1), Borsos filed a motion seeking restitution.

11 One issue at the restitution hearing was whether a NUHW
12 Board resolution to reimburse NUHW individual defendants for sums 13 garnished was conditioned on an obligation to reimburse NUHW in 14 case of later restitution. The resolution's text did not mention 15 reimbursement. But this trier of fact believed (and so finds as 16 fact) the testimony that the resolution was adopted on the 17 condition that garnishees agree to refund to NUHW reimbursed 18 amounts later recovered. Such a condition is consistent with 19 recognition of the fiduciary duties of union officials that, 20 ironically, was the central issue in the SEIU damages action for 21 which the board was authorizing indemnification.<sup>2</sup>

22 Borsos (who no longer works for NUHW) was reimbursed by NUHW
23 (which survives as a union) for the amounts garnished and remains 24 obliged to reimburse NUHW for amounts restored to him.

25 Additional facts are stated in the discussion below.
26

27 <sup>2</sup>The legal fees incurred by SEIU/UHW pursuing this vendetta
28 cause one to wonder whether they have been adhering to standards they say they were vindicating in the SEIU damages action.

1                                    Jurisdiction

2            Federal subject matter jurisdiction is founded on 28 U.S.C.
3 § 1334(b). This is a core proceeding that a bankruptcy judge may 4 hear and determine as of right. 28 U.S.C. §§ 157(b)(2)(I) & (O).

6                                    Discussion

7            The equitable right to restitution of what has been taken by 8 enforcement of a judgment that is subsequently reversed has an 9 ancient pedigree. It is a matter of inherent authority of every 10 court in the name of doing what is right. The key questions are 11 whether the right has been surrendered in some respect or whether 12 inequity would result from restitution.

14                                    I

15            By 1710, it was established in English law that restitution
16 was required where money is levied and paid in execution of a 17 judgment that is later reversed. Anonymous, 2 Salkeld, Reports
18 of Cases Adjudg'd in the Court of King's Bench ... to the Tenth
19 Year of Queen Anne, 288 (printed 1718), cited with approval, Bank
20 of United States v. Bank of Wash., 31 U.S. (6 Pet.) 8, 17 (1832).
21

22            The Supreme Court has repeatedly applied this subsequent 23 reversal restitution doctrine. E.g., Bank of United States, 31
24 U.S. at 16-17; NW Fuel Co. v. Brock, 139 U.S. 216, 219-20 (1891);
25 Arkadelphia Milling Co. v. St. Louis S.W. R. Co., 249 U.S. 134, 26 145-46 (1919); Baltimore & O. R. Co., 279 U.S. 781, 786 (1929).
27

28            No particular form of action is required. Sometimes it is, as here, done by motion. NW Fuel Co., 139 U.S. at 217.

Sometimes by independent action for money had and received or

1 simple contract (assumpsit). Bank of United States, 31 U.S. at 2 17. Formerly, a writ of scire facias was often used.<sup>3</sup> Courts
3 can also act sua sponte. RESTATEMENT (FIRST) OF RESTITUTION § 74,
4 cmt. a (1937) ("RESTATEMENT (FIRST)").<sup>4</sup>

5 Under modern rules, the procedure is even more flexible
6 where the original parties are before the court. RESTATEMENT
7 (THIRD) OF RESTITUTION § 18 (2011) ("RESTATEMENT (THIRD)").<sup>5</sup>

8
9 <sup>3</sup>The writ of scire facias was the old form of action to 10 initiate a show-cause proceeding. In federal practice, the writ 11 of scire facias was abolished in 1937 with the adoption of the 12 Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. The relief formerly available under a writ of scire facias may now be obtained by "appropriate action or motion" under the Civil Rules. Fed. R. Civ. P. 81(b).

13 <sup>4</sup>The RESTATEMENT (FIRST) explained the procedural alternatives.

14 a. Procedure. The rule stated in this Section is 15 applicable to cases where a judgment has been entered upon
16 which money has been paid by the defeated party or property
17 has been sold on execution, and where subsequently such 18 judgment is reversed, set aside or modified, because of lack 19 of power in the court rendering it, because of errors of 20 law, or for other reasons. In such cases there are various 21 methods which can be used for securing restitution. The 22 reversing tribunal can itself direct restitution either with 23 or without conditions, or the tribunal which is reversed can 24 on motion or upon its own initiative direct that restitution
25 be made. Formerly, a common method of obtaining restitution was by a writ of scire facias quare restitutionem non. In spite of the existence of such remedies, however, an independent action of assumpsit can be maintained and the claim can be used as a set-off in proceedings in which set-offs are allowed. Likewise, where the judgment which was reversed directed the possession of property to be transferred or where execution was levied and property taken thereunder, an action for specific restitution can be maintained except as against a bona fide purchaser.

26 RESTATEMENT (FIRST) § 74, cmt. a (emphasis supplied), comment
27 incorporated by RESTATEMENT (THIRD) § 18, rptr. note b.

28 <sup>5</sup>The RESTATEMENT (THIRD) explains:

Subject to local procedural requirements, the restitution

1 The most recent Restatement reflects the federal precedents
2 and may be taken as an accurate statement of federal law:

3 § 18. Judgment Subsequently Reversed or Avoided

4 A transfer or taking of property, in compliance with or 5 otherwise in consequence of a judgment that is subsequently 6 reversed or avoided, gives the disadvantaged party a claim
7 to restitution as necessary to avoid unjust enrichment.

8 RESTATEMENT (THIRD) § 18;<sup>6</sup> see, e.g., PSM Holding Corp. v. Nat'l 9 Farm Fin. Corp., 743 F. Supp. 2d 1136, 1141-45 (C.D. Cal. 2010).

10 Where restitution is sought from the judgment creditor (as 11 opposed to a third party), and where both parties are before the 12 court, restitution is virtually automatic.

13 The court has wide latitude to control the procedure and may 14 conduct all needed inquiry in a summary proceeding so long as the 15 opposing party is heard. NW Fuel Co., 139 U.S. at 220.

16 claim described in this section may be asserted in any forum
17 having jurisdiction. Restitution may therefore be decreed by 18 an appellate court as an incident of its power to correct
19 errors. It may be ordered by the original tribunal on remand 20 (either sua sponte or on motion); or following reversal even 21 without remand, as an exercise of the court's inherent 22 equitable powers; or in response to a collateral attack on 23 the judgment. Restitution may also be sought in a separate 24 action in any court having jurisdiction.

25 RESTATEMENT (THIRD) § 18, cmt. b.

26 <sup>6</sup>The correlative version in the RESTATEMENT (FIRST) was:

27 § 74 Judgments Subsequently Reversed

28 A person who has conferred a benefit upon another in compliance with a judgment, or whose property has been taken thereunder, is entitled to restitution if the judgment is reversed or set aside, unless restitution would be inequitable or the parties contract that payment is to be final; if the judgment is modified, there is a right to restitution of the excess.

RESTATEMENT (FIRST) § 74.

II

It is of no consequence that the contested garnishments occurred in execution of a money judgment issued by a United States District Court and not by this bankruptcy court.

A

A general answer to the question of this court's authority is that a prevailing appellant may seek restitution of all things taken under the judgment in the same or an independent action.

In other words, this is a permissible collateral attack.

RESTATEMENT (THIRD) § 18, cmt. b.

The critical requirements are that the parties to the Borsos judgment must be before this court and that the garnishing party have an opportunity to be heard. NW Fuel Co., 139 U.S. at 220. Those requisites are present here.

B

A more precise explanation of this court's authority is that the dispute is within core bankruptcy jurisdiction because the underlying dispute involves the effect of the bankruptcy discharge on the money judgment.

It is a proceeding that relates to the dischargeability of a particular debt. 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(I).

And it is a proceeding affecting the adjustment of the debtor-creditor relationship. 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(O).

The judgment, the reversal of which occasions the request for restitution of garnished funds, is a judgment of this court in a nondischargeability proceeding and not the judgment of the 1 district court.

2 Every court, including this bankruptcy court, has inherent 3 equitable power to correct that which has been wrongfully done –
4 here, enforcement of a judgment that should not have been 5 enforced – by virtue of its process. Arkadelphia Milling Co., 6 249 U.S. at 145-46.

7 Thus, it makes no difference that the underlying money
8 judgment was entered by a court other than the bankruptcy court.
9 The overlay of bankruptcy results in de facto concurrent
10 jurisdiction over the money judgment. This court, having created
11 the problem in the first instance with its incorrect judgment 12 excepting the district court's money judgment from discharge, is 13 obliged to skin its own skunk.

14

16 The parties correctly sense that there is a bankruptcy issue 17 arising from reversal of this court's judgment excepting the 18 judgment debt from discharge. But they incorrectly focus on the 19 automatic stay; the real problem is the effect of the bankruptcy 20 discharge and accompanying discharge injunction.

21

23 The relevant chronology begins with the filing of the Borsos
24 chapter 7 case on December 22, 2010. SEIU/UHW, which had already 25 garnished $2,019.74 from Borsos' NUHW wages, ceased judgment
26 collection. The Borsos discharge was entered April 8, 2011.
27 This court's judgment excepting the money judgment from discharge
28 was entered March 15, 2012. The first garnishment of Borsos'

1 wages in reliance upon the judgment excepting the debt from 2 discharge was on August 3, 2012. Those post-bankruptcy
3 garnishments, which totaled $15,830.04, ceased upon reversal of 4 that judgment by the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel.

5 It warrants emphasis that we are dealing with a problem of 6 retroactivity. At the time, the post-bankruptcy garnishments did 7 not necessarily offend basic bankruptcy law.

8
9 B

10 The parties engage in a moot debate about whether the 11 automatic stay invalidated the post-bankruptcy garnishments. The 12 automatic stay had expired before the garnishments occurred.

13 As a matter of law, the automatic stay's protection of the 14 debtor expired with entry of the discharge on April 8, 2011. 11
15 U.S.C. § 362(c)(2)(C). This discharge was not vacated. Nothing 16 was left to reinstate with respect to the debtor.

17 Although the automatic stay continued to protect property of 18 the estate, post-petition wages are not property of the estate in 19 a chapter 7 case. 11 U.S.C. §§ 362(c)(1) & 541(a)(6).

20 Hence, the garnishments of post-petition wages could not 21 have violated the automatic stay, and the cited cases involving 22 "reinstatement" of the automatic stay are inapposite.

23

25 The real problem is that the post-petition garnishments
26 retroactively offended the bankruptcy discharge and the discharge 27 injunction.

28 The discharge "voids" any judgment at any time obtained –

1 i.e. past, present, and future – to the extent that it determines
2 the personal liability of the debtor with respect to a discharged
3 debt. 11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(1).

4 Correlatively, the discharge “operates as an injunction”
5 against any act to collect a discharged debt as a personal 6 liability of the debtor. 11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(2).

7 But the § 524 discharge provisions invite uncertainty. In 8 the sense of formal logic, insulating a debtor from liability on 9 a discharged debt “begs the question” by assuming the conclusion.
10 With respect to any particular debt, § 524(a) assumes that the 11 debt has been discharged.

12 Ascertaining whether a debt actually has been discharged can 13 be a complex problem. The Bankruptcy Code excepts a variety of 14 debts from discharge. 11 U.S.C. § 523(a).

15 Some discharge exceptions, including the alleged § 523(a)(4)
16 fiduciary defalcations here, necessitate judicial determination.

17 Litigation over discharge status necessarily takes time.
18 Appeals take even more time. Final determination of whether a 19 debt is discharged cannot be known with certainty until the end
20 of the appellate road.

21 Here, all relevant collection activity occurred after this 22 court ruled that the debt was excepted from discharge and before 23 that judgment was reversed. Without a stay pending appeal and in 24 the absence of the automatic stay, the judgment could be enforced
25 immediately. Enforcement in the context of a nondischargeability 26 judgment means resuming collection.

27 But, by choosing to enforce a judgment on appeal, SEIU/UHW
28 took the risk that the debt would ultimately turn out to have

1 been discharged and the risk that there would be consequences.

2 The ultimate victory of the debtor after re-trial on remand
3 that was not appealed operated to establish that all post-
4 bankruptcy collections were on account of the debtor's personal 5 liability on a discharged debt. That, retroactively, meant that 6 the collections were on account of a void judgment and offended
7 the § 524(a)(2) discharge injunction.<sup>7</sup>

8 While punishment with the heavy hand of contempt may not be 9 appropriate in such circumstances, the strategy was not riskless.
10 At a minimum, SEIU/UHW took the risk that the $15,830.04 would 11 turn out to have been collected on a void and unenforceable 12 judgment in violation of the discharge injunction and that an 13 ameliorative remedy would be in order.

14 UHW contends, however, that there was an intervening
15 settlement and that restitution would unjustly enrich Borsos.

16
17 IV

18 In its counter-motion, UHW says that the restitution issue
19 was resolved by way of a settlement agreement that should be 20 enforced even though Borsos declined to sign the agreement.

23 <sup>7</sup>The language of the statutory § 524(a)(2) injunction is:

24 (a) A discharge in a case under this title – (2) operates 25 as an injunction against the commencement or continuation of 26 an action, the employment of process, or an act, to collect, 27 recover or offset any such [discharged] debt as a personal liability of the debtor, whether or not discharge of such debt is waived;

28 11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(2).

1 A

2 The facts relating to the purported settlement warrant
3 separate statement.

4 UHW's counsel testified that he orally offered on December
5 16, 2014, a "walk away" settlement in which UHW would not appeal
6 and Borsos would not seek costs or return of garnished funds.

7 Borsos' counsel responded on December 29, 2014: "We accept
8 your proposal to end this matter. We agree that we will waive 9 fees in exchange for your agreement to waive appeal rights."

10 UHW's counsel emailed a draft settlement agreement on 11 January 15, 2015, to which Borsos' counsel promptly responded
12 "the agreement is acceptable." Thereupon, UHW's counsel emailed 13 a final version in form suitable for signature.

14 Borsos' counsel responded to repeated status inquiries with 15 "I am awaiting the return of the release from John Borsos" and "I 16 am doing my best to get John to return it to me."

17 On February 25, 2015, UHW's counsel sent Borsos' counsel a 18 copy of the settlement agreement executed by UHW.

19 On March 6, 2015, Borsos' counsel responded that he thought 20 the agreement was merely an exchange of UHW's right to appeal for 21 Borsos' forbearance on costs and that, while UHW could keep the 22 $2,019.74 garnished pre-bankruptcy, UHW should refund the 23 $15,830.14 garnished during the bankruptcy.<sup>8</sup>

---

24 <sup>8</sup>The explanation was:

25
26 My concern about the settlement agreement is based upon my 27 understanding that the agreement represented simply an 28 exchange of UHW's right to appeal for our forbearance on the costs. However, the agreement as drafted includes a provision (par. 5) requiring Borsos to agree not to seek the refund of funds garnished from his wages during the pendency

1 UHW's counsel replied two hours later that it was too late
2 to renege on the agreement "accepted" by the January 15 email.<sup>9</sup>

3 Neither Borsos nor his counsel ever signed the settlement 4 agreement.

5 A routine file review revealed that the clerk of court had 6 mislaid and not entered on docket the judgment signed at the end
7 of trial. The judgment was immediately re-issued and entered on 8 docket on June 1, 2015. That triggered the time to file a notice
9 of appeal. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 8002(a)(1). No appeal was filed.

10 Borsos' Motion For Return of Property seeking restitution 11 was filed June 18, 2015. UHW responded with a counter-motion to 12 enforce the settlement agreement.

13
14 _____
15 of the bankruptcy.

16 As you know, Borsos filed for bankruptcy in December 2010.
17 Prior to that date UHW garnished $2019.74 from his NUHW
18 salary. However, after the bankruptcy was filed and the 19 automatic stay went into effect, UHW garnished $9164.76 from 20 Borsos' wages in 2012 and 6665.28 in 2013. We believe that 21 UHW must refund this amounts - a total of $15,830.04.

22 Siegel to Demain email 03/06/2015, 2:57 p.m.

23 <sup>9</sup>The response was:

24 That provision was part and parcel of the settlement from 25 our very first discussion on December 16, 2014, as reflected 26 in my contemporaneous notes from that conversation, and was 27 set forth in the draft settlement agreement that you 28 accepted in your January 15, 2015 e-mail. The only thing left to do is for you and Mr. Borsos to execute the written document to which you have already agreed. Without agreeing as to whether the amounts of the garnished wages recited in your e-mail below are correct (which I haven't checked), any claim for a refund of those amounts has been waived by your acceptance of the settlement agreement. Please return to me the fully-executed settlement agreement.

Demain to Siegel email 03/06/2015, 4:54 p.m.

UHW contends that the settlement agreement should be deemed to have been accepted on January 15, 2015. Citing California precedents, it argues that all that remained was the ministerial act of executing the agreement because all of its terms had been accepted. This court is not persuaded.

First, the December 29 acceptance ("we agree that we will waive fees in exchange for your agreement to waive appeal rights") is consistent with not having agreed to forego restitution of post-bankruptcy garnishments. The January 15 email ("the agreement is acceptable") is consistent with a preliminary view of counsel in a context in which the client would still be able to review the text in detail. "Acceptable" is not "accepted." This court believed the testimony of Borsos' counsel. There had not been a final and unequivocal acceptance of the form and of all terms of the settlement agreement.

This is not a situation in which a party was lured into not filing a timely notice of appeal. UHW knew that Borsos still wanted return of his $15,830.04 as of March 6, 2015. A notice of appeal would still have been timely as being after the court ruled orally on the record and before the docketing of the judgment by the clerk, which did not occur until June 1, 2015. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 8002(a). UHW had plenty of time to appeal.

Finally, the argument that the settlement agreement was binding as of January 15 when counsel said it was "acceptable" suffers from a fatal flaw embedded in paragraph 12 of the settlement agreement: "This Settlement Agreement shall become binding on the undersigned parties, effective, and enforceable on

1 the last date of execution shown below."

2 That no-binding-agreement-until-everyone-has-signed
3 provision would have to be ignored in order to accept UHW's
4 argument. UHW drafted the agreement and included the provision.

5 It follows from the terms of UHW's paragraph 12 that there
6 could be no binding settlement agreement without actual 7 signatures. UHW is hoist with its own petard.

10 The final question is whether restitution is, in the words
11 of the Restatement (Third), "necessary to avoid unjust 12 enrichment." RESTATEMENT (THIRD) § 18.

13 The UHW argument has an odd twist. Instead of attempting to 14 establish an affirmative defense that UHW would not be unjustly 15 enriched by keeping funds garnished on account of a judgment that 16 was subsequently reversed, UHW contends that if it were to 17 disgorge the $15,830.04 that it took from Borsos, then Borsos
18 would be unjustly enriched.

19
20 A

21 The reluctance of UHW to talk about whether it would be 22 unjustly enriched by keeping the funds garnished on a later-
23 reversed judgment does not make that question any less relevant.

24 There being no affirmative defense asserted by UHW, unjust
25 enrichment of UHW on the reversed money judgment is both presumed 26 and patent. In addition, a powerful policy reason regarding the 27 viability of the statutory bankruptcy discharge further dictates 28 the same conclusion.

The requirement of restitution where money is levied and paid in execution of a money judgment that is later reversed is so deeply embedded in at least three centuries of our legal tradition that, as between the parties to the judgment, it amounts to a presumption favoring restitution where a debtor has been compelled by law to pay a claim that on the merits is not legally enforceable. See, e.g., NW Fuel Co., 139 U.S. at 219 ("the only question of discussion has been as to the proceeding to enforce the restitution"); RESTATEMENT (THIRD) § 18, cmt. e.

As between the parties to the judgment, the presumption that restitution is necessary to avoid unjust enrichment is difficult to gainsay. The likely affirmative defenses (change of position or no unjust enrichment) are difficult to prove in the face of the need to remedy the misapplication of process inherent in legal compulsion to pay a claim that is not legally enforceable.

As the Restatement (Third) explains, preventing the law from stultifying itself by compelling payment of a claim that the law says may not be compelled "constitutes an important reason for restitution that is independent of the individualized equities of the parties." RESTATEMENT (THIRD) § 18, cmt. e.

In contrast, affirmative defenses are more readily established when restitution is sought from a third party who may be a bona fide payee or bona fide purchaser. See, e.g., Bank of United States, 31 U.S. at 16-17 (disapproving restitution from nonparty to judgment but noting entitlement to restitution from party to judgment); RESTATEMENT (THIRD) § 18, cmt. g.

Thus, it is when the restitution would be from a third party

1 that the analysis of "necessary to avoid unjust enrichment"
2 becomes delicate. But this is not such an instance.

3 Here, the dispute is between the original parties to the 4 money judgment. The judgment creditor garnished in reliance on a
5 bankruptcy court judgment that the judgment debt was not
6 discharged in bankruptcy. That bankruptcy judgment was reversed.
7 The judgment creditor has not proffered an affirmative defense to 8 counter the presumption that it would be unjustly enriched by 9 keeping the funds. Its silence on that point is deafening.

10 It follows that restitution of $15,830.04 is necessary to 11 avoid unjust enrichment of UHW. As is usual in cases of 12 restitution, interest accrues from the date of the garnishments 13 at the interest rate applicable to the original money judgment.

14 RESTATEMENT (THIRD) § 18, cmt. h & § 53.

15

17 Bankruptcy discharge policy independently supports restoring 18 the garnished funds to Borsos.

19 The discharge operated to render "void" the district court's 20 money judgment to the extent it was a determination of the 21 personal liability of the debtor regardless of whether discharge 22 was waived. 11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(1).

23 The statutory discharge injunction against collection of 24 that discharged judgment debt as a personal liability of the 25 debtor regardless of whether discharge was waived was offended by 26 garnishment. 11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(2).

27 To be sure, the discharge status and the contempt of the 28 § 524(a)(2) discharge injunction had to be ascertained

1 retroactively because garnishment occurred before reversal. At 2 the time of garnishment, the status quo suggested that the 3 garnishment was permissible.

4 As noted, the judgment creditor's choice to enforce the 5 money judgment while it was still on appeal concomitantly
6 constituted a choice to bear the risk of reversal. For any money
7 judgment, that choice was to risk an order of restitution. For a 8 discharged money judgment, that choice was to risk an order of 9 restitution and to risk consequences for retroactive violation of 10 the § 524(a)(2) discharge injunction.

11 Excusing restitution would create misguided incentives, 12 especially in the context of bankruptcy. There should be an 13 incentive to be careful when enforcing a judgment still on 14 appeal. There should not be an incentive to take a cavalier 15 approach to the § 524(a)(2) discharge injunction.

16 Sensible bankruptcy policy dictates fostering incentives for 17 creditors to proceed with caution in the vicinity of the 18 bankruptcy discharge.

19 An appropriate remedy for violation of the § 524(a)(2)
20 discharge injunction is, at a minimum, restitution.

21 It follows that restitution is necessary to avoid unjust
22 enrichment of UHW under general principles of restitution and, on 23 an adequate, independent basis, as a remedy for violation of the 24 § 524(a)(2) discharge injunction.

25
26 B

27 The UHW argument that Borsos would be unjustly enriched if 28 funds garnished from his wages had to be returned to him amounts

1 to an argument that he would reap a double recovery because NUHW
2 indemnified him for the garnished funds.

4 1

5 From the standpoint of the law of restitution, the argument
6 is misplaced.

7 First, it incorrectly assumes that Borsos would not be 8 required, in turn, to reimburse NUHW. This court has determined 9 as a finding of fact that the NUHW board's resolution adopting 10 the indemnification policy came with a condition that it be 11 reimbursed for any garnished funds that ultimately are returned 12 to a judgment debtor. Thus, if Borsos were to attempt to retain 13 the funds, he would be exposed to a claim by NUHW for breach of 14 contract or for restitution. See RESTATEMENT (THIRD) § 24.

15 Second, the argument sidesteps the only unjust enrichment
16 question that matters: whether UHW would be unjustly enriched by 17 pocketing the funds garnished from Borsos. The answer is, "yes."

18
19 2

20 From the standpoint of the § 524(a)(2) discharge injunction, 21 a potential double recovery is even less persuasive.

22 It is beyond cavil that UHW violated the § 524(a)(2)
23 discharge injunction, which is not entirely a toothless tiger.
24 The judgment enforcement activity may have been legally
25 permissible at the time that it occurred, but it was undertaken
26 in the teeth of an appeal with, as previously noted, the risk 27 that reversal could lead to trouble. Nevertheless, UHW chose to 28 rush forth where angels might fear to tread.

1 UHW's protest that the reimbursement of Borsos by NUHW for 2 the sums garnished might lead to double recovery is not a defense
3 to a restitution order to UHW as a remedy for UHW's violation of 4 the § 524(a)(2) discharge injunction. To allow UHW to keep the 5 $15,830.04 would confer upon UHW a windfall for its violation.

6 UHW, as a wrongdoer in this context, is in essentially the 7 same position as a tortfeasor. By protesting a potential double
8 recovery, UHW implicates the collateral-source rule that applies 9 to torts and similar wrongs.

10 It is settled law that payments made to an injured party
11 from other sources are not credited against the wrongdoer's 12 liability, although they cover all or a part of the harm for 13 which the wrongdoer is liable. RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF TORTS
14 § 920A(2) (1979) ("Effect of Payments Made to Injured Party").

15 There is no reason that the collateral-source rule in the 16 law of damages for wrongdoing should not at least inform the 17 analysis of a § 524(a)(2) discharge injunction.<sup>10</sup>

18
19 <sup>10</sup>The standard rationale for the collateral-source rule 20 comfortably fits § 524(a)(2) discharge injunction violations, which are more analogous to tort than to contract:

21 b. Benefits from collateral sources. Payments made or 22 benefits conferred by other sources are known as collateral-23 source benefits. They do not have the effect of reducing 24 the recovery against the defendant. The injured party's net 25 loss may have been reduced correspondingly, and to the 26 extent that the defendant is required to pay the total 27 amount there may be a double compensation for a part of the 28 plaintiff's injury. But it is the position of the law that a benefit that is directed to the injured party should not be shifted so as to become a windfall for the tortfeasor.
... If the benefit was a gift to the plaintiff from a third party or established for him by law, he should not be deprived of the advantage that it confers.

RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF TORTS § 920A, com. b.

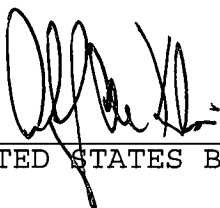

1 Even if Borsos could reap a double recovery, that would not
2 offend the collateral-source rule in the law of damages and would 3 constitute an appropriate measure enforcing the § 524(a)(2)
4 discharge injunction. Any attendant reimbursement issue between 5 Borsos and NUHW is between them, without intervention by UHW.

6
7 Conclusion

8 Restitution of the $15,830.04 that was garnished from the 9 wages of chapter 7 debtor John Borsos on account of a money
10 judgment that was initially excepted from the bankruptcy
11 discharge by a judgment that was later reversed and that 12 ultimately was discharged in bankruptcy will be ordered.
13 Restitution is required under the analysis described in the 14 Restatement (Third) of Restitution § 18 and the precedents on 15 which it is founded. Restitution is also appropriate as a remedy 16 for violation of the § 524(a)(2) discharge injunction. Give the 17 money back.

18 An appropriate order will issue.
